EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Business Problem and Process Overview

This project aims to investigate identity fraud, which is the most prevalent sort of account origination fraud. Fraudsters apply for a product or service using different identities than their own. There are three types of identity fraud; Identity theft: fraudsters use real but stolen identities, identity manipulation: fraudsters alter their own identities (ssn, dob, name), synthetic fraud: fraudsters create entirely fabricated identities. Our supervised fraud algorithm examines all incoming applications and flags any that appear unusual and potentially fraudulent. The procedure is as follows: a consumer first applies for a credit card at a bank, and then the bank submits the application to a credit bureau, which assesses the applicant's fraud risk based on past data and returns the application to the bank. The bank then decides whether to offer a credit card to the customer.

Predictive Analytics Pipeline

The original dataset has 1,000,000 records and 10 columns of personal identifying information from applications in 2016. Records have been labeled to indicate whether the application is fraudulent. We didn't consider the first two weeks of data for training or testing the model because it wasn't fully established. We divided the data into train and test till October. The last two months were set aside as a hold-out set (OOT) to evaluate the model's performance. We developed a Data Quality Report to understand the dataset's quality before building the fraud algorithm.

To create the fraud algorithm, we conducted a comprehensive data flow procedure. We cleaned the data by treating irrelevant and frivolous values. Then, using various combinations of personal identifying information and time variables, we created over 10,700 variables, scaled them all, and used filter and wrapper sequentially (feature selection) to select the most important predictors. We then performed baseline modeling (logistic regression) before experimenting with five non-linear models by tuning hyperparameters. Finally, assessing model performance on out-of-sample data, we chose the optimal model with the best model performance (FDR).

Results

Finally, we had two models that performed admirably. Random Forest and Gradient Boosting Tree. After carefully examining the trade-off between complexity and accuracy, Gradient Boosting, with 100 trees and a maximum depth of 15 for each tree, was the simplest model to give us the best fraud detection rate of 53.73% FDR at 3% on out of time data. Please see the Results section for a complete description of our top model's training, testing, and out-of-time data performance.

Data Quality Report

Columns: record, date, ssn, firstname, lastname, address, zip5 (zip code), dob (date of birth), homephone, fraud_label (1 for fraud, 0 for non-fraud).

Daily trend

Figure below shows the number of applications daily grouped by fraud_label. Except for 2016-02-29, the number of not-fraud applications daily is stable. However, the number of fraud applications daily varies largely day by day. On Feb 4th, 2016, the number of fraud applications daily hit a peak, reaching 90.

This column indicates the social security number filled by applicants. As shown in the figure below, a large number of applicants have SSN of 999999999. Besides, many applications have the same SSN, which is a red-flag and requires a further investigation.

Homephone

This column indicates the home phone number filled by applicants. Figure below shows top 15 most frequent occurrence of homephone numbers. A large number of applicants have home phone of 999-999-9999. Many applications have same homephone number, which is a red flag that should be checked further.

DATA CLEANING

1. Fix data type

Format date column from integer (e.g. 20160101) to datetime64 (e.g. 2016-01-01).

2. Identify null values and outliers

We do not have any missing fields or outliers in our dataset.

3. Identify exclusions

- Classify records in the last two months as out-of-time data (OOT)
- Remove the first 2 weeks of records since their variables are not well formed

4. Fix frivolous field values

Sometimes, when an application has a missing field, this field will be filled in with a made-up value by someone or a system. These made-up values are frivolous values. If we link by them, we can get undesired results. As a result, we need to treat these values to remove likely false positives. Two methods we can use are changing frivolous values to record number and changing them to negative values.

- For ssn, 16,935 records have 999999999 as their Social Security Number. We change the Social Security Number for these records to the opposite of the corresponding record number

5. Ensure same number of digits in each column

Add leading zeros for zip5, ssn, dob, and homephone, so values in each column can have the same number of digits.

CANDIDATE VARIABLE

Starting with 7 basic identity information, we get a data frame with 10,797 columns via the following four steps.

1. Secondary Variables

Specifically, we created 6 secondary fields as shown in the table below.

Table 3. Summary of secondary fields

ssn_area_group	first 5 digits of ssn	area number + group number
st_rd_bldv	street/road/blvd name derived from address	street/road/blvd name

For entities, we created 52 entities by combining fields, for example name is created by combining firstname and lastname, fulladdress is created by combining address and zip5, name_dob is created by combining name and dob.

The full list of secondary entities is: [name, fulladdress, name_dob, name_fulladdress, name_homephone, fulladdress_dob, fulladdress_homephone, dob_homephone, homephone_name_dob, ssn_firstname, ssn_lastname, ssn_address, ssn_zip5, ssn_dob, ssn_homephone, ssn_name, ssn_fulladdress, ssn_name_dob, age_ssn, age_address, age_dob, age_homephone, age_name, zip3_ssn, zip3_address, zip3_dob, zip3_name, homephone3_ssn, homephone3_address, homephone3_dob, homephone3_zip5, homephone3_name, ssn_area_address, ssn_area_dob, ssn_area_zip, ssn_area_name, ssn_area_lastname, ssn_area_firstname, ssn_area_group_address, ssn_area_group_dob, ssn_area_group_zip, ssn_area_group_name, ssn_area_group_lastname, ssn_area_group_firstname, st_rd_bldv_ssn, st_rd_bldv_dob, st_rd_bldv_zip, st_rd_bldv_zip3, st_rd_bldv_name, st_rd_bldv_homephone3, st_rd_bldv_homephone, st_rd_bldv_lastname, st_rd_bldv_firstname].

ssn_unique_count_for_address_7, ssn_unique_count_for_address_14, ssn_unique_count_for_address_30, ssn_unique_count_for_address_60, etc.

FEATURE SELECTION PROCESS

After creating the variables, the total number of variables is 10,797. The model would be complex and the machines' computing power would be burned out if including all the variables. Feature selection is necessary for reducing substantial computational costs and overfitting. There are several feature selection methods, such as Exhaustive Search, Filter, Wrapper and Embedded methods. The Embedded method was used for this application fraud project by combining Filter and Wrapper methods. Below are the detailed steps:

1. Filter

- No matter what models to choose, if the variables fail to differentiate the distribution of the events, then there are still wrong predictions. So, the Filter method is needed for finding the most relevant variables. There are many filter methods, such as Chi-square Test, Fisher Score and Kolmogorov–Smirnov (KS) test. For this binary classification problem, Univariate KS was picked to filter the variables. KS measures how to distinguish the distribution of fraud (bad) and non-fraud (good)
- Before the actual filtering process, the data of the last two months and the first two weeks were removed. The first one was used as out-of-time data and the other was removed because the data in the first two months are not sufficient for measuring the relevancy of the variables
- A random variable and actual fraud label were added to make sure the accuracy of the method. Based on the KS score, the number of variables was limited to 300. The limitation of this step is that it did not eliminate multicollinearity. The Wrapper method was used to reduce the multicollinearity problem and continue to simplify the model down to 30 variables

2. Wrapper

- There are three Wrapper methods: Forward Selection, Backward Selection and General Stepwise Selection. A one-variable Random Forest model was started and then the variable which yielded the highest Fraud Detection Rate (FDR) was kept. Then a second variable was added to find the best combination with the highest FDR. The step was repeated 30 times to get the final 30 variables

MODEL ALGORITHMS

Logistic Regression

Logistic Regression is great for supervised binary classification problems like this fraud detection project. It applies the maximum likelihood function to find the probability of the possible outcomes and convert to binary values based on threshold and gives a decision boundary. The function (sigmoid function) can be written as:

$$P(X) = \left(\frac{e^{\beta_0 + \beta_1 X}}{1 + e^{\beta_0 + \beta_1 X}} \right)$$

Decision Tree

A decision tree approximates the surface $y = f(x)$ with a set of steps or platforms. The model building process decides where to draw the boxes to divide the independent variable space and what the score in each box should be.

Decision tree algorithm:

- Start with a first candidate dimension/variable (x_1) and on one side of the dimension
- Slide the candidate cutpoint until passing the minimum # points for a leaf
- Calculate the resulting total impurity of the candidate cut (3 measures: variance, gini index and entropy)
- Slide the cutpoint point until one point crosses over and update the impurity measure
- Continue until cannot slide anymore
- Go to the next dimension (x_2) and redo
- Continue through all the dimensions
- Choose the best cutpoint that results in the lowest impurity
- Continue the same process in each of the resulting two boxes
- Continue until stopping criterion reached (low enough total impurity, minimum points/leaf...)

Decision trees are fragile and unstable as with slightly different data, the model will choose different cutpoint that gives different-looking trees. Also, they are prone to overfitting as they look at the training data and divide it into boxes which is easy to isolate regions unique to that data set.

The parameters we tuned are:

- criterion: the function to measure the quality of a split, supported criteria are “gini” for the Gini impurity and “entropy” for the information gain
- splitter: the strategy used to choose the split at each node, supported strategies are “best” to choose the best split and “random” to choose the best random split
- max_depth: the maximum depth of the tree. If None, then nodes are expanded until all leaves are pure or until all leaves contain less than min_samples_split samples
- min_samples_split: the minimum number of samples required to split an internal node
 - if int, then consider min_samples_split as the minimum number
 - if float, then min_samples_split is a fraction and $\text{ceil}(\text{min_samples_split} * n_samples)$ are the minimum number of samples for each split
- min_samples_leaf: the minimum number of samples required to be at a leaf node. A split point at any depth will only be considered if it leaves at least min_samples_leaf training samples in each of the left and right branches. This may have the effect of smoothing the model, especially in regression

Random Forest

Random forest consists of a large number of individual decision trees. Each individual tree in the random forest spits out a class prediction and the class with the most votes becomes our model's prediction (see figure below).

Cite: <https://towardsdatascience.com/understanding-random-forest-58381e0602d2> by Tony Yiu

The fundamental concept behind random forest is “the wisdom of crowds”. A large number of relatively uncorrelated models (trees) operating as a committee will outperform any of the individual constituent models. With a random forest model, our chances of making correct predictions increase with the number of uncorrelated trees in our model.

The parameters we tuned are:

- n_estimators: the number of trees in the forest
- max_features: the number of features to consider when looking for the best split. If "auto", then max_features=sqrt(n_features)
- min_samples_split: the minimum number of samples required to split an internal node.
- min_samples_leaf: the minimum number of samples required to be at a leaf node. A split point at any depth will only be considered if it leaves at least min_samples_leaf training samples in each of the left and right branches

Gradient Boosting Tree

Gradient boosting trees is one of the methods to improve the performance of decision trees, which usually has the problem of overfitting. Instead of combining independent models like bagging, boosting starts with a weak model and then adds the following sequence of trees to finally get a robust model. Each time the newly added tree is to minimize the error of the previous model. The objective of GBT is to minimize the loss function. Below is a cartoonish description of GBT.

The parameters we tuned are:

- n_estimators: the number of trees used
- learning rate: how fast the model learns. The lower the learning rate, the more precise the model
- max_depth: the maximum number of nodes of a tree
- num_leaves: the maximum number of leaves of a tree

Support Vector Machine (SVM)

1. Support vector machines (SVMs) projects data into a higher dimensional space as shown in figures above, and separates classes using a linear classifier separator
2. Instead of projecting to an actual higher dimension, it uses a kernel trick to project to a virtual or an abstract higher dimension
3. SVM algorithm works on a concept of margin to find a robust linear separator using hyperplane as shown in figures above. The separator is completely defined by the location of the data points on the boundary, which are called the support vectors. If we increase the 'C' parameter, the SVM tries to reduce the misclassification

One of the major drawbacks of SVMs is it consumes a lot of CPU time and is computationally expensive.

The parameters we tuned are:

- C: regularization parameter, the penalty is a squared L2 penalty
- kernel: specifies the kernel type to be used in the algorithm, supported types are 'linear', 'poly', 'rbf', 'sigmoid', 'precomputed' or callable

Neural Network

A neural net consists of an input layer, a number of hidden layers and an output layer.

- All the independent variables (x 's) form the input layer
- The dependent variable y is the output layer (the graph has a single output y as the classic supervised learning problem is about $y = f(x)$)
- In between input layer and output layer, we can put as many hidden layers as we want. The hidden layer is a set of nodes (the graph has one hidden layer and three nodes)
- Each node in the hidden layer receives weighted signals from all the nodes in the previous layer: $\sum \beta_i x_i$ (β_i is the corresponding weight, x_i is the corresponding value)
- The node then does a transform on this linear combination of signals: $\frac{1}{1 + \exp(-\sum \beta_i x_i)}$
- The transform/activation function can be a logistic/sigmoid function (typical), or anything else

The parameters we tuned are:

- `hidden_layer_sizes`: the i^{th} element represents the number of neurons in the i^{th} hidden layer
- `activation`: activation function for the hidden layer
- `solver`: the solver for weight optimization
- `alpha`: L2 penalty (regularization term) parameter
- `learning_rate`: learning rate schedule for weight updates. Only used when `solver` = 'sgd'
- `learning_rate_init`: the initial learning rate used. It controls the step-size in updating the weights, only used when `solver` = 'sgd' or 'adam'
- `max_iter`: maximum number of iterations
- `shuffle`: whether to shuffle samples in each iteration. Only used when `solver` = 'sgd' or 'adam'
- `momentum`: momentum for gradient descent update. Only used when `solver` = 'sgd'
- `nesterovs_momentum`: whether to use Nesterov's momentum. Only used when `solver` = 'sgd' and `momentum` > 0

RESULT

After getting multiple sets of models, our finalists are two models. One is a 2000-tree Random Forest whose max depth of each tree is 110. The other is a 100-tree Gradient Boosting whose max depth of each tree is 15. However, the Random Forest model has a slightly higher out-of-sample performance than the Gradient Boosting model.

Table 7. Trade-off Table

	Random Forest	Gradient Boosting
of trees	2000	100
max depth	110	15
Test FDR	56.22%	56.59%
OOT FDR	53.81%	53.74%

After carefully considering the trade-off between complexity and accuracy, we decided to let the simple one - Gradient Boosting model as our final choice. Model performances and hyperparameters are listed below:

Table 8. Hyperparameters of the final model

Hyperparameter	Value
of tree	100
learning rate	0.1
max depth	15
num_leaves	40
min_child_samples	30
min_data_in_leaf	20
subsample	1
subsample_freq	0
colsample_bytree	1
colsample_bynode	1

* if there is any other hyperparameter not listed, then we set it to the default value

Table 9. FDR of the final model

Train	56.55%
Test	56.59%
OOT	53.74%

You may refer to the following tables to see model's performance on different number of bins. We used FDR to measure model's goodness.

CONCLUSION

The original dataset has 1,000,000 records and 10 columns of personal identifying information from applications in 2016. In summary, we did the following steps:

- Removed the first two weeks data and fixed frivolous values in 4 fields, ensuring the eligibility of data frame
- Generated various candidate variables via four steps, obtaining a data frame with 10,797 columns
- Applied the Embedded method, a combination of Filter and Wrapper, to select top 30 variables
- Hold out the last two months data (OOT) as our out-of-sample test set
- Built both parametric and non-parametric statistical learning models, getting the “best” models of each set of models based on FDR on test sets
- Compared FDR of “best” models on OOT data and consider the trade-off between simplicity and accuracy, getting our final model – Gradient Boosting Trees

We measured our final model’s goodness via FDR at 3%. On train, test and OOT data set, our model receives FDR at 3% of 57.04%, 55.11% and 53.37%, respectively. This indicates that the model is valid and of predictability, and we can apply it to the business for practical use.

Many different feature selection and modeling methodologies have been left for the future due to time limit. Future work concerns the deeper analysis of entity patterns, new features to try different, more sophisticated models. Specifically, our model can be improved in the following ways:

- Create new entities and features. In current work, we created features centered on time series data of number of days, number of applications and number of unique records. In the future, we can create other sets of features based on advice from industrial experts
- Try other sophisticated models. In current work, we applied widely used models, such as random forest and support vector machines. For further improvement, we can try other deep learning algorithms

1.1 record

The column serves as a unique identifier of each application.

1.2 date

1.2.1 daily trend

The column marks the date of application is received, ranging from 2016-01-01 to 2016-12-31. Figure 1 shows the number of applications received daily. During a typical day, the company receives 2,600-2,900 applications, while the number dropped to 0 on 2016-02-29. Figure 2 is a zoom-in line plot of daily applications. The number of applications received per day fluctuates around 2,730.

Figure 2 shows the number of applications daily grouped by fraud_label. Except for 2016-02-29, the number of not-fraud applications daily is stable. However, the number of fraud applications daily varies largely day by day. On 2016-02-04, the number of fraud applications daily hit a peak, reaching 90.

1.2.2 weekly trend

Figure 3 shows the number of applications received per week. The sharp drop in late December is because the last week of the year only contains 4 days. If we replace the number of applications in the last week of February and December with that in the previous week, we are able to zoom in. Most of week, the number of applications weekly flatulates between 18,900 and 19,500.

Figure 4 shows the number of applications weekly grouped by fraud_label. Except for 2016-02-29, the number of not-fraud applications weekly is stable. However, the number of fraud applications daily varies largely day by day. During the third week of July, the number of fraud applications weekly hit a peak, reaching 374.

1.3 ssn

The column marks the social security number filled by applicants. As shown in the figure 5, a large number of applicants have SSN number of 999999999. Besides, many applications have the same SSN, which is a heads-up and requires a further investigation.

1.4 firstname

The column marks the first name filled by applicants. Figure 6 shows the top 15 most frequent occurrence of firstname. Eamstrmt is the most frequent one, occurring 12,000 times.

1.5 lastname

The column marks the last name filled by applicants. Figure 7 shows top 15 most frequent occurrence of lastname. The most frequent one is Erjsaxa, reaching 8,000.
